'Squawks' on Charity?

Chamber Screening Group May Keep Policy Secret

Probability that certain organizations "will do a little squawking" may alter a Chamber of Commerce plan to protect Victoria business people from the growing number of charitable appeals.

One section of a report recommending the formation of a "solicitations group" was questioned at a Chamber public affairs group meeting Tuesday afternoon. It states:

"It is agreed that the clearing house committee will not recommend for donations, general requests for religious, sporting, fraternal, veteran and any other similar organizations or clubs."

John Coppinger, Chamber secretary-manager, said "the feeling is these groups can raise funds from their own members."

Dr. Hugh Borsman moved that the board of directors be asked to consider the deletion of the section.

He said it was true that "church bazaars and fraternal organizations can give the most trouble, with their door prizes and so on . . .

"But after all," he said, "you say the solicitations bureau intends to screen everyone making requests, so these groups should have the same chance."

This section means, in effect, said Dr. Borsman, "that you're not recognizing their existence at all.

"Unless this section is taken out, they'll probably do a little squawking . . . and maybe they'll have a legitimate squawk, too.

"You don't have to tell them your policy," he said. "Keep it a secret, but let the screening committee handle it."

"You've got a point there," said Eric Mallett, chairman of the group. The meeting endorsed the move.

Report on the solicitations group was submitted by Mr. Mallett and W. A. Laudrum, chairman of the retail merchants group, which has also approved the plan.

Business people are the "prime target" of these increasing appeals, said the report.

"Many business people, even when unhappy about an approach made in a doubtful cause, hesitate to say 'no' because of the public relations aspect," it was pointed out.

By paying only $5 a year, each member of the solicitations bureau would "get a card to hang on his wall" identifying him as a member and referring the canvassers to the bureau.

"The card alone discourages many of them," said Mr. Coppinger, who added that the plan was working very well in Winnipeg.

"Any merchant giving to charity likes to be sure his money is going to charity, but he hasn't the time to check and make sure," he said.

"They will save many times more than the $5 fee by subscribing to the bureau."

Bitten by Rabid Cat

Renee, right, and John Lefernik, left, were scratched by a cat near their home at Limehouse, Ont., then were rushed to hospital to be given anti-rabies injections. Their father said the children, including Bert and Ada, coaxed the cat from a woodpile and it sprang at them. He killed the animal and took its body for rabies examination.

Simpson Funeral

More than 75 friends and relatives of well-known Victoria golfer, club member and war veteran Robert Alexander Simpson, 52, attended his funeral at McCall's funeral home yesterday.

A past member of Macaulay and Colwood Golf Clubs, Mr. Simpson died suddenly Sunday. He was also a member of the Britannia Branch, Canadian Legion, and the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

He served as a commando with the 2nd Battalion Canadian Scottish during the Second World War.

Pallbearers included Denis Heinekey, Keith Rowlandson, Leo Derman, Paul Jenkins, Floyd Malcolm and Cyril Lyseng.

Ear Trouble Can Lead To Serious Trouble

Ear trouble is real trouble to parents. Most children have some form of pain in their ear at one time or another in their lives. Also many adults' loss of hearing was directly caused by infected ears with similar pain.

With modern treatment methods there is no reason why all infected ears cannot be stopped and defective hearing should be a thing of the past. School children frequently complain of buzzing in their ear, partial deafness, running ears or a plain ear ache. These children should receive prompt care from their family doctors as soon as possible.

Parents are the key persons if serious ear complaints are to be avoided.

Infections in the middle ear usually follow as a complication to childhood diseases such as scarlet fever, measles, influenza or whooping cough. By careful observation your child will usually show signs of being more ill by having a rise in temperature, increasing restlessness and more pain, sometimes pulling at his ears.

Call your doctor if you see these signs as serious ear infections develop rapidly but can easily be avoided by prompt treatment.

Running ears are caused by infections which have broken the ear drum and are draining. This situation requires prompt attention. Also great care is needed in preventing additional infection as there is an open pathway through the hole in the drum into the inner ear.

Partial deafness can be caused by throat infections in which tubes leading from the throat into the ear become blocked. The child will not be very ill but attention is still needed.

Tonsil problems are often linked with ear trouble as a child's "adenoids" sometimes swell up and block this tube to the inner ear producing a slight hearing loss. With frequent colds and sore throats a child's "adenoids" may grow large enough to cause impaired hearing.

Parents should consult their doctor if they see any of the following in their children: Continued hearing difficulty following a cold or sore throat; hearing difficulty along with a running nose; impaired hearing and breathing through the month; a running ear, or an unusual object in the ear.
